About Maggy Krell:

Maggy Krell has spent over 20 years fighting for justice and protecting vulnerable communities. As Deputy Attorney General, she earned the City of Refuge “Hero Award” for her work supporting survivors of sex trafficking and the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children’s career achievement award for safeguarding at-risk kids. A mother of two teenage boys and a youth basketball coach, Maggy prioritizes creating opportunities for young people through education, job training, and access to safe recreational spaces. As Planned Parenthood’s lawyer, she defended reproductive freedom, and during the Trump administration, she rushed to the border to reunite immigrant families. Maggy is focused on tackling California’s toughest challenges. She will work to prevent crime, protect vulnerable communities, and address homelessness by increasing housing opportunities and expanding addiction and mental health support. Maggy is dedicated to building a stronger economy with affordable housing and fair wages, ensuring all Californians can thrive.
